11	Course Learning Outcomes
1	Research and research methods You will have the ability to use a range of techniques and research methods applicable to advanced scholarship in the discipline. You will learn how to conduct qualitative and quantitative research of relevance to forensic psychology, and you will conduct at least one empirical study. You will have the appropriate skills and capabilities to collect and analyse data relevant to forensic psychology.
2	The legal and criminal justice context for forensic psychology You will be able to demonstrate a critical understanding of the psychological theories and evidence of relevance to processes in the justice system, including: the legal framework of the civil and criminal justice systems; processes of investigation; the legal process; the process of detention; working with litigants, appellants, and individuals seeking arbitration and mediation; and interdisciplinary and multi-agency working.
3	Assessment and formulation You will be able to demonstrate a critical understanding of different approaches to assessment and formulation in relation to assessing individuals, groups and / or organisations. You will also be able to demonstrate a familiarity with the processes and tools of assessment in line with the particular focus offered within this course.
4	Interventions You will demonstrate a critical understanding of the range of interventions available for offenders, patients and at risk individuals, victims / survivors, professionals, groups and organisations. You will understand different approaches and be able to identify strengths and weaknesses of these approaches to inform the selection of appropriate interventions. You will be able to evaluate the effectiveness of interventions.
5	Client groups You will have the knowledge and skills to enable you to progress to working with a range of client groups including: different types of offenders, patients and at risk individuals; victims / survivors; individuals across the lifespan (including children and young people in conflict with the law); males and females; professionals, groups, and organisations.
6	Forensic settings You will have the knowledge and skills to enable you to progress to working within a range of settings and contexts relevant to forensic psychology, including: prisons; secure units; hospitals; mental health; police; courts (including criminal, family and civil); community settings; charities and social enterprise. You will understand issues of organisational culture and systems, and the ways in which these impact on the practice of forensic psychologists and other professionals. Your understanding of legal and professional practice frameworks, though relevant to the full Stage 1 curriculum, will be particularly relevant to your developing understanding of the work of forensic psychologists in different settings.
7	Development and training You will be able to recognise the need to take responsibility for your own professional development, and you will therefore understand the principles and utility of reflective practice for your current and future development as a forensic psychology student, practitioner, or academic. You will also understand the forensic psychological theories and evidence underpinning the development and training of others.
8	Advice and consultancy You will demonstrate a critical understanding of the forensic psychological theories and evidence relevant to working with organisations to contribute to the development of practice, guidance and / or policy. You will also understand the principles and procedures that forensic psychologists use when evaluating the practice of organisations and conducting consultancy

13 Overall Student Workload and Balance of Assessment

Overall student workload consists of class contact hours, independent learning and assessment activity, with each credit taken equating to a total study time of around 10 hours. While actual contact hours may depend on the optional modules selected, the following information gives an indication of how much time students will need to allocate to different activities at each level of the course.

- Scheduled Learning includes lectures, practical classes and workshops, contact time specified in timetable
- Directed Learning includes placements, work-based learning, external visits, on-line activity, Graduate+, peer learning
- Private Study includes preparation for exams

The balance of assessment by mode of assessment (e.g. coursework, exam and in-person) depends to some extent on the optional modules chosen by students. The approximate percentage of the course assessed by coursework, exam and in-person is shown below.

Level 7

Workload

% time spent in timetabled teaching and learning activity

Activity	Number of Hours
Scheduled Learning	216
Directed Learning	164
Private Study	1420
Total Hours	1800

Balance of Assessment

Assessment Mode	Percentage
Coursework	75%
